The compound obtained by replacing both the aldehyde group and the hydroxymethyl group (CH₂OH) in the molecule of the open-chain form of an aldose with carboxylic acid groups is called an alderic acid.

eg:

Contributors

- Gamini Gunawardena from the OChemPal site (Utah Valley University)