An alkane is a saturated hydrocarbon whose molecule contains only open carbon chains. An open carbon chain is one whose terminals can be identified.

eg. 1:

No available image

This molecule has one carbon chain and its terminals can be identified.

eg. 2:

This molecule has three carbon chains and their terminals can be identified.

Contributors

• Gamini Gunawardena from the OChemPal site (Utah Valley University)