In a mass spectrum, the tallest peak, whose relative abundance is arbitrarily assigned the value 100%, is called the base peak. It represents the most abundant cation formed in the experiment.

see also molecular ion peak

Contributors

• Gamini Gunawardena from the OChemPal site (Utah Valley University)