A dehydrohalogenation is an elimination reaction in which the net reaction is the loss of a molecule of a hydrogen halide (HF, HCl, HBr, or HI) from the molecule of the substrate.

eg. 1:

\[
\text{eg. 2:}
\]

Overall, dehydrohalogenation is the exact opposite of hydrohalogenation.

Contributors

- Gamini Gunawardena from the OChemPal site (Utah Valley University)