The region between 400 cm$^{-1}$ and 1500 cm$^{-1}$ in an IR spectrum is known as the fingerprint region. It usually contains a large number of peaks, making it difficult to identify individual peaks. However, the fingerprint region of a given compound is unique and, therefore, can be used to distinguish between compounds.

Contributors

- Gamini Gunawardena from the OChemPal site (Utah Valley University)